WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

A West-to-East zonal flow pattern will be in place over Northern California through Thursday as a series of lows track across the northern tier states and high pressure builds over the Desert Southwest and southern California. The high pressure will gradually become the dominant feature for Northern California, producing a drying and warming trend. By Wednesday temperatures will warm to near normal. A light north to northeast downslope surface wind pattern will be in place during nights and mornings in and around the Sacramento Valley, but come to an end by early afternoon each day. Afternoon southwest to west winds east of the Cascade-Sierra crest will gust to around 30 mph each afternoon. Coastal regions will be mild and breezy under the influence of the marine layer. On Friday a low pressure trough will begin to develop overhead and it is expected to deepen through the weekend. There is only a slight chance of afternoon convection in far northern areas beginning Friday. The bigger impact will be a gradual cooling trend with increasing winds. Areas east of the crest will have afternoon gusts to 30-35 mph.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Current west to northwest winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph across the desert passes and the Grapevine will lighten by mid morning as the area of low pressure that moved inland across the Pacific Northwest yesterday moves to the northeast and into Canada this morning. A weak Pacific trough over the West Coast will cause temperatures to remain a little below normal today, with 70s to low 80s across the mountains and mid 80s to mid 90s in the valleys. High pressure currently over West Texas will expand westward bringing a slow warming trend to the region Tuesday through Thursday. Temperatures will be 5 to 10 degrees above normal by Thursday. Another weak Pacific trough will bring slow cooling to the area Friday through this weekend. This trough will also bring south to west winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph to the desert passes Friday through this weekend. Minimum humidity will be mainly in the teens away from the coastal areas through Tuesday and then there will be more in the way of single digit minimum humidity Wednesday through this weekend.
